BY THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE LORDS OF THE COMMITTEE OF HER MAJESTY'S MOST HONOURABLE PRIVY COUNCIL ON EDUCATION.

At South Kensington, 25th day of January 1870.

PRESENT :

THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARL
DE GREY AND RIPON, K.G.

FORSTER, M.P.

MY LORDS read the following Memorandum, prepared by Mr. Cole, on the Proofs of the Universal Catalogue of Books on Art, which They direct shall be inserted in the first volume of the Catalogue.

MEMORANDUM.

1. On the 5th April 1864 I had the honour to submit the following Memorandum to the Lord President of the Council (the Earl Granville, K.G.) and the Vice-President of the Committee of Council on Education (the Right Hon. H. A. Bruce, M.P.), who were pleased to approve of the proposal.

1. Instead of making the Catalogues for the Art Library and the educational and other scientific divisions of the South Kensington Museum dependent upon the accidental collection of works, I recommend that measures be taken for forming a Catalogue of all those works in the languages of all countries, which ought if possible to be found in the respective divisional libraries.

2. To do this, it would be necessary to search the Catalogues of the British Museum, the Bodleian and other British libraries, as well as the libraries of continental Europe and the United States.

3. The proposed Catalogues would therefore represent certain classes of literature tolerably complete up to a given date.

4. Such Catalogues being once printed, would supersede the necessity for the editions at present constantly recurring.

5. By indicating in the Catalogues the works as they are obtained, the deficiencies of the collection, as well as its possessions, would always be patent.

6. Such Catalogues would be useful in all libraries, and to students in all parts of the world, and would in the end prove more economical and much more useful than the present system.

This recommendation is based on a suggestion of Mr. Dilke's, made in the Athenæum before 1851. (Mr. Dilke died in 1864.)

(Signed) HENRY COLE,
General Superintendent.

At a subsequent Board meeting, 12th October 1865, the following minute was passed :—

1. The South Kensington Museum has been furnished with an Art Library which is always on the increase, and for this Library, as far as it has been practicable, every important work has been collected, bearing on the history, literature, and illustration of Fine Art, and Art applied to industry.

2. Several editions of the Catalogue of the Library have been printed and published from time to time ; but these, from the daily increase of the Library, have become imperfect almost as soon as they have been issued.

3. With the object of providing against an imperfection of continual recurrence such as the foregoing, and for other considerations, my Lords have ordered the compilation of a Catalogue on a basis altogether new.

4. It is proposed that the New Catalogue shall include not only the books in the Library, but all books printed and published, at the date of the issue of the Catalogue, that could be required to make the Library perfect ; that is, to compile a universal record of printed Art books which are known to exist up to that period, wherever they may happen to be at the time.

5. It is obvious that immediate perfection cannot be expected in such a work, and that many deficiencies, errors, and imperfections must constantly be met with. It is therefore proposed, by means of occasional supplements, to rectify them and to add notices of any books not brought to light at the time of issue, as well as of such further publications as continue to appear.

6. By reference to the proposed Catalogue, any reader in the Art Library of the Museum would thus find a clue, not only to the works he was looking for in the actual collections of the Library, but to other works bearing on his course of studies which had not as yet been obtained, but which had been ascertained to form part of other libraries, whether public or not, either in our own or in any foreign country. All rare books would have a reference given to the libraries in which they are to be found. By this means also the deficiencies of the Art Library would be demonstrated, and provision made for its ultimate completion.

7. Such a Catalogue, it is thought, would prove a valuable acquisition to Art literature throughout the world, and would have such an international interest as to justify Her Majesty's Government in inviting the co-operation of other Governments towards its accomplishment.

8. The nature, however, of such an undertaking entails difficulties partly inherent, as having reference to the proper limits of the special subject-matter of the Catalogue itself, and partly from the scattered position of libraries and collections, many of them unfurnished with any trustworthy and attainable account, either printed or manuscript, of their own contents, from which the Catalogue, so far as it refers to books not in the South Kensington Library, must of necessity be compiled.

2. Accordingly the materials for the titles of the books have been obtained, with the uniformly courteous assistance of the Librarians, from the Catalogues of the Libraries of the British Museum, the Bodleian Library Oxford, Trinity College Dublin, Royal Society London, London Institution, Royal Institute of British Architects, London Library, the Athenæum, Soane Museum, the Cicognara Collection, and numerous Foreign Libraries, together with those in the National Art Library at the South Kensington Museum. These materials have been enriched by notices which have been furnished from time to time, and received from the commencement of the Catalogue to the close of 1869, from upwards of 400 correspondents (see note, page vi.) in different parts of the world. The following return will show the various languages in which titles of books have been received towards the completion of the Catalogue :—

Danish	-	-	-	-	7
Dutch	-	-	-	-	96
English	-	-	-	-	2,575
French	-	-	-	-	7,935
German	-	-	-	-	1,348
Italian	-	-	-	-	1,786
Japanese	-	-	-	-	2
Latin	-	-	-	-	721
Polish	-	-	-	-	179
Spanish	-	-	-	-	60
Swedish	-	-	-	-	85
Total					14,794

3. Instead of waiting for years before printing the titles in course of being collected, it was decided to publish portions of the Catalogue in "Notes and Queries," as proofs. This work must therefore only be judged as one subject to future revision, condensation, and additions. There is no doubt that a mass of information has been obtained through this mode of publication which would have been impossible except by some such process.

4. After preparation of the rough titles so collected they have been revised by Mr. John Hungerford Pollen, M.A., late Fellow of Merton College, Oxford, who was appointed the editor of the Catalogue. It is right to mention that in the official preparation of the work assistance has been given by Mr. Philip Cunliffe Owen, an assistant director of the Museum, by Dr. Appell, an Assistant Keeper, and by the following provisional assistants, Mr. H. Vernon, Mr. A. Masson, Mr. Kesson, and Mr. Macauliffe.

5. It is estimated that these proofs will furnish about sixty-seven thousand notices of printed works relating to Art interpreted in a wide sense, but many additional titles of works printed before 1870 will be hereafter obtained. The collection of them will be a work of considerable time. In the preparation of the first proofs it was necessary to adopt the usual principle of arranging the titles under the authors' names, as far as possible. It is intended to complete the Catalogue by sub-classifications, 1st under subjects, 2nd according to chronology, 3rd according to the country where the work was printed; and I recommend that this be proceeded with through the ordinary staff of the Art Library.

6. I am happy to be able to report that the cost of this work will be within the original estimate.* Its use, I feel confident, will be great in the Schools of Art in the United Kingdom and all other similar institutions, as well as to students of Art in all countries.

HENRY COLE,

22nd January 1870.

Director of the South Kensington Museum.

UNIVERSAL CATALOGUE OF BOOKS ON ART.

The Universal Catalogue of Books on Art contains titles of books on Painting, Sculpture, Architecture; on Mosaics, Enamels; hand-wrought utensils in all materials which show a decorative intention; on tombs, monuments bearing sculpture, and on decoration of all kinds. Books on Music are not included.

Books on Archæology, as illustrating the ideas that underlie so many decorative forms and artistic compositions of different periods, and Books on Coins, often the sole authority for portraiture, and even illustrative of architectural monuments, are included. To these have been added books on Anatomy, composed for the use of artists, and works on Natural History full and exact enough to be of use to, or likely from their character to interest Art Students.

The mass of Art Literature consists of treatises, lectures, and essays on Art treated theoretically; of biographies and notices of artists; accounts and descriptions of monuments; and of remarks and criticisms showing the merits and defects of paintings, sculptures, utensils, buildings, or the like, and discussing the qualities and methods of various masters.

Thus the theory, history, and criticism, and instruction in the practice of Art form the subject-matter of Art Literature, and the catalogue includes books in which this matter is to be found. Much of such matter is in the form of monographs, scattered papers, or notices, published in the printed Transactions or Journals of Artistic, Antiquarian, Scientific, or Literary Societies, and even Popular Newspapers. These are sometimes valuable in the inverse ratio of their length and publicity; sometimes the number and consent of independent contributions throw light from their multiform character on disputed questions. Such contributions to the cause of Art, whether large and elaborate, or short and casual, have been catalogued as far as they could be verified, and references have been given where required.

To these have been added Voyages and Travels, or other books containing plates of monuments and costume, either as the only records, or as independent records, of much that interests the Art Student.

Care has been taken to collect the titles of works on localities of special interest, or illustrating special monuments, costumes, etc.; and to notice copies which have been enlarged and supplemented by collectors with plates not forming part of the original series, when known to be in public libraries.

It has not been found easy to draw limits to the representation of the Art that has been used to illustrate Literature. The illustrated editions of the classic poets and favourite writers of ancient and modern literature, such as Æsop, Boccaccio, Ovid, etc., will, it is hoped, be found to represent fairly a succession of the best Art of this kind in all countries, from the time of the invention of block printing to the present day.

It has not been possible, hitherto, to verify the existence of illustrations in all the books understood to have them, or to examine their quality.

INTRODUCTION.

THE IMPORTANCE of a Catalogue to a Library of any extent cannot well be overstated. A Dictionary is not more necessary to a language ; and while languages are living traditions, and may be orally acquired by the educated and the ignorant, the contents of libraries, if large in extent, are but partially mastered by the studies of a lifetime.

Living Librarians of competent learning would be, without doubt, the best guides to large repositories of books. If such directors could be always on the spot, and at everybody's command, they would infinitely surpass the written information of a book. But the vastness of the intellectual legacy, bequeathed by the ages as they pass, the shortness of life, and the restless activity of human curiosity and research, defy the possibility of satisfaction from such a source as this.

One instrument alone can supply, not indeed all that is wanted—for we should ask to have all the paths of human knowledge laid out with science and method—but all that is possible, and that instrument is a well-arranged Catalogue. With such a work in our hands, we know at once whether a book we want is in a Library. This is the great point to ascertain, and it is the one kind of help which Libraries can afford to enquirers ; not to save readers the labour of study, but to give access with the least trouble and delay, to the books that they contain.

In speaking of Catalogues, this essential point must be kept in view. The arrangement and object of such works have been often discussed, and the method of composing particular Catalogues has been eagerly, if not acrimoniously, attacked and defended. Very different objects are sometimes considered as primary for Book-Catalogues, and disappointment is felt if these are not attained. Thus the division of a General Library into classes of books under different heads is often looked for, as well as the history and peculiarities of each book. The last is the proper province of Bibliography; and the former is, on a large scale, difficult, because the literary public will never be agreed as to the method of classification, the number of classes, or the limitations of each. The attempt to divide the books in the British Museum after this method would hide under one class books which many readers would look for under another. Time would thus be lost by students, while the re-arrangement of the classes would be an endless labour. On a limited scale such Catalogues have been composed. The admirable Catalogue of Lord Spencer's Library, by Dibdin, may be quoted as a specimen. Such works on special kinds of books, or on books of particular dates or periods, will remain literary acquisitions of great value. But they are possible only on a narrow field. In a large Public Library they would oftener perplex than guide the student, and, for general use, prove costly failures.

The one simple and sufficient object, therefore, of a Catalogue of Books is to give, in the smallest space, a faithful description or title of each book, accurately copied from its title-page; the full name or names of the writer; the account, in its own words and spelling, that the book gives of itself, even should the writer's name be omitted. And as Public Libraries are institutions for reference, not for education, and presuppose students looking for special books or authors, no scheme has been devised so simple or so easy as an alphabetical arrangement of books under the authors' names or assumed names, or the catch-word by which an anonymous book is known.

Most Public Libraries in Europe have adopted this arrangement more or less methodically; and our own British Museum, not without full examination and discussion, and patient hearing of every learned dissident, has done the same, and its method and regulations have been adopted by the Smithsonian Institution in New York. The British Museum Library, as the reader well knows, is the largest and most complete in the kingdom, though numbers of works remain still to be acquired for it. Costly bequests, such as the collection of King George III., the Grenville and other collections, embracing books that were the Royal property of King Henry VII. and his successors, having been made to the Museum, its numbers are to some extent swelled by duplicate copies, and much has had to be done to fill up gaps and deficiencies so as to represent all branches of literature evenly. But for many years this work has been carried on with care and intelligence. Perhaps few national collections, at the present time, though larger in number of volumes, would prove more generally complete.

The great collections in our national seats of learning, Oxford, Cambridge and Dublin, may be expected to be more specially devoted to ancient learning, theology, and mathematics. Other institutions of great public utility have Libraries, more or less special in range, open to general students, with various degrees of restriction. Of all it may be said that, without a Catalogue well kept up as fresh books are acquired, they would become sources of incessant disappointment, instead of help and consolation to the student.

At a more recent date, a National Library of Art Books has been placed in the South Kensington Museum. The class of books of which it is composed is, of course, special and limited, but within this particular range every care has been taken to make it as complete as possible. Of this Library the general public has the fullest use: but its first object is the education of students in the National Schools of Art. As far as can be done without impairing the usefulness of the collection as a Library of Reference, the books are allowed to circulate to the Schools.

If a Catalogue is so necessary to a Collector's Library, and to a Public Institution, how much more to persons who can come but seldom to London and have the privilege of sending for books to their respective Schools, and must be able to know what they can send for.

And here we come to another step in the progress of Catalogues—that of printing and publication. If the necessity of resorting to the Catalogue when using a Public Library is acknowledged, the advantage of possessing a printed copy of the Catalogue will be obvious; the reader would know beforehand whether or not the books required were really to be found in the collection.

A Printed Catalogue has been very peremptorily demanded of the British Museum. One was produced in 1813, and another, carried to the end of the letter A, some years later. It was left off for the very simple reason, that it could never be kept exact. Books are daily added to the Library, having their places all down the range of each letter, and consequently, requiring the incessant rectification of the alphabetical order. The Bodleian Library at Oxford has published a Catalogue, and continued it with supplements. These are, in other words, a series of separate Catalogues, and each is always more or less incomplete. There is but one way of meeting such a difficulty. It is by making the Catalogue complete, and gradually bringing the Library up to the range of the Catalogue. By this means all the books on a given subject up to the date of publication would be included in the Catalogue. The works in the particular Library would be noted, and references to accessible Libraries given, as far as possible, for other books. Librarians might use it for all similar collections, noting their own possessions in the margin. Were such a Catalogue made for Literature generally, it would form a common standard for the world of letters throughout the globe. It would simplify literary research, and destroy many barriers that now impede or neutralize the efforts of students and writers all the world over.

In days of International Exhibitions and Competition, when such enormous resources are spent on great meetings doomed to immediate and perpetual separation, it may be worth considering whether a common and enduring benefit would not result from the united action, in this direction, of different countries at a cost very trifling, when compared with the expenditure found necessary for our vast international gatherings.

Be this, however, as it may, the Lords of Committee of Council on Education have determined to supply, as far as possible, the schools and students under their direction with such a Catalogue. The circulation of books from the National Art Library makes the printing of the Catalogue doubly necessary, and the interest felt and expressed, not only by men well versed in Art-literature in our own country, but by distinguished professors, collectors, and amateurs of all ranks all over the Continent, in the prosecution of such an undertaking, shows how popular it promises to be.

Portions of letter A, already printed and published through the columns of the Times, have been submitted to European representatives assembled at Paris; and the approval of the project, both by official judges and by the Presidents and Directors of the great Art Institutions of Europe, has been universal.

As has been already announced, the publication of the proof-sheets of this Catalogue, complete to 1867, is to be carried on in the 'Notes and Queries.' The sheet will be arranged so that the whole may be bound in one volume. To obtain additions and corrections from the public is the special object of the circulation of these proof-sheets in their necessarily imperfect state. The work cannot be made complete without external aid.

With this general introduction of the subject, the work will be submitted by the Department to the public, of whom it asks nothing so much as assistance in completing the Catalogue.

As to the special scope and limits of the work itself, which is devoted to the one subject of Art books, these will form the subject of a future notice. The great importance of a Catalogue, and the universal character of the one about to be laid before the public, are the two first considerations for the reader in perusing the dry and, apparently, uninviting columns of such a production.

This very interesting and important collection is extremely scarce in complete sets. It is divided into two series. The first, called by the French bibliographers Grands Voyages, on account of its large size, contains the travels to the West Indies, and consists, in the Latin edition, of 13 vols., 1590–1634. (Of the first nine vols. there is a new impression of the same date, and another, Franckfurt, Merian, 1634.) The second series, called Petits Voyages, contains the travels to the East Indies, and consists of 12 vols., 1598–1634. (Of several vols. there is a new impression.)

There are 14 vols. of the “Grands Voyages,” and 13 of the “Petits Voyages” in the German edition; and of several vols. new editions have also been printed. (For a detailed account of the whole work, see BRUNET, vol. i. col. 1310–1363, and col. 1898–1902; GRÆSSE, Trésor de Livres, Supplément, p. 124–134.)
